Carolyn Napier is one of 250 Cedarville residents and college students who are participating in skin products testing by Procter & Gamble in order to raise $5,000 for a new ambulance.

Village Fund-raising

Two-hundred and fifty residents of Cedarville, including many college students and faculty, are participating in a skin patch product test given by Procter & Gamble. For their participation, Cedarville will receive $5,000 toward the purchase of a new ambulance for the fire department.

Before new products are put on the market, Procter & Gamble tests the products and their individual ingredients on volunteers for allergic reactions. The products are first tested on guinea pigs. If there are no problems or complications there they are tested on employees, then on the public. In order to get volunteers, Procter & Gamble offers an incentive; for Cedarville, it is a new ambulance.

Procter & Gamble does about nine of these tests per year, using 250 people each time and testing four products. The products are put onto cotton pads and taped to the volunteers' arms. They must wear the patch for twenty-four hours, and then remove it. Twenty-four hours after removing the patch, the volunteers receive another one which is put in the same spot. Each time the people return for a new patch, their arms are carefully checked for any reactions before the new patch is applied. This continues for a total of ten patches.

If anyone is truly allergic to the product or to one of its ingredients, Procter & Gamble will work with that person to see why he is allergic. If they can not find a specific reason they will continue to check each individual ingredient until they find the one to which that person is allergic. They will then either remove that ingredient or dilute it in some way. If that person is still allergic they will often discontinue work on that project.

Summer ministries

While other students are working, attending summer school, or vacationing, over 90 Cedarville students, faculty, and alumni will spend the summer traveling across the United States with teams or around the world as short term missionaries.

Summer Swordbearers, Abundant Life Singers, the Kingsmen Quartet, and the Master's Puppets will be representing Cedarville in churches throughout the United States. From June 10 to August 24 the five member puppet team will be conducting five day Vacation Bible Schools in Ohio, Indiana, and New York.

The Eastern Seaboard is the destination for Summer Swordbearers, who will be ministering for ten weeks in camps and churches with music, seminars, children's programs, and canvassing.

The Abundant Life Singers will be conducting nightly services in such southern states as Florida, Georgia, and Texas; the Kingsmen Quartet are traveling north and west to Michigan, Montana, and other neighboring states. The previous three teams will be on the road from June 6 to August 15. In addition to their other responsibilities, each group will take part in the National GARB Conference which will be held in Dayton.

Approximately 60 Cedarville people will be involved with the Missionary Internship Service (MIS) program on various fields around the world. The Australia Team, led by Cedarville graduate Paul Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh, will be ministering through music and preaching in Australia from June 7 to July 12. They have access to schools, shopping malls, and nursing homes as well as churches.

The medium of basketball will be implemented in the Philippines as a means of witnessing to the people there. Coached by Roy Carr, a Cedarville graduate and teacher at Cedarcliff High School, the team consists of students, alumni, and one high school player. Their schedule in the Philippines extends from June 2 to July 8.

Faculty members hired for 79-80

There will be four new professors coming to Cedarville College next year. The first is Keith Clark, who will be the assistant Professor of Health and Physical Education. Married with four children ages 16, 14, 12, and 5, Mr. Clark got his B.A. from Fairmont State College in 1964, and his M.A. from Xavier University in 1972. He has had a wide experience in teaching and athletics in such schools as Landmark Christian.

Dr. Charles Dolph will take the position as Assistant Professor of Psychology, replacing Dr. Jack Scott. He got his B.A. at Cedarville in 1974, his M.A. from Georgia State, and is working on his Ph.D. at Georgia State. He has experience in many areas of psychology, such as therapy work and counselling, and has considerable interest in relating biblical principles to his field. He will be teaching General Psychology, Abnormal Behavior and Group Counselling.

Another new professor is Mark Larson, who will become the Assistant Professor of Spanish, replacing Miss Carmin Shirk. He received his B.A. from Bob Jones in 1975, spent a year of study at the University of Madrid, and received his M.A. from Middlebury College in 1977. He has spent four years in the navy, and is getting married this summer to Susan Schneider. He will teach Elementary and Intermediate Spanish, and Spanish Literature this fall.

The last professor is John Silvius, who will become the Assistant Professor of Biological Sciences, replacing Dr. Walter Griffith. He is married with two children, ages 9 and 4. He received his B.A. at Malone in 1969, and his Ph.D. at West Virginia University in 1974. His area is Botany; he has taught at the University of Illinois, and he is currently doing research for the U.S. Department of Agriculture at Beltsville, Maryland.

J-S Banquet Tonight

The annual Junior/Senior Banquet will be held tonight at the Netherland Hilton in Cincinnati. Each year, the Junior class sponsors a banquet as a tribute to the graduating seniors. This year's theme is "In the Glory of His Image."

Approximately sixty juniors have participated in planning and organizing the details for this event such as the rental of the banquet hall, the provision of the meal, entertainment, and decorations. Dress will be formal, and the Junior class has arranged to have flowers for the tables.

The dinner reception begins at 6:30 p.m. The meal will include roast beef, baked potato, green beans, salad, bread and rolls, chocolate mousse, and a choice of beverage. Entertainment will be provided by Steve and Maria Gardner, a contemporary folk duo from Dallas Texas.

This banquet is open to the entire student body of Cedarville College, and about four hundred students are expected to attend. Tickets went on sale in the lobby of the Gym/Student Center on Wednesday, May 9, 1979. The cost of tickets were $11.50 apiece for freshmen and sophomores, and $5.00 for juniors. Seniors attend free of charge as the banquet is in their honor.

For Saturday, following the banquet, the Student Activities Department has organized a "Cincinnati Day." This will be a day when Cedarville students can go basically on their own to various attractions in the Cincinnati area.

Student Activities will have tickets available for the Cincinnati Reds game against Los Angeles at 7:30 p.m., Saturday night, and also tickets to King's Island and the Cincinnati Zoo.

A picnic lunch at a local park is being planned for between 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. Saturday afternoon. Students will be able to stop in and eat and then travel wherever else they plan to go. Because of the wide variety of events offered, students must provide their own source of transportation.

Dish crew system improved

This year Cedarville College has been privileged to have the opportunity to employ a particularly gifted group of young people. This group is commonly known as the dish crew.

The dish crew has been responsible for much of the mealtime entertainment. At times, one may walk past the dishroom during a meal and hear the "Dishroom Quartet" singing any one of a number of songs from the current favorites to the old time gospel hymns. On occasion, the men even dress up for the event. Tuxes tend to catch a person's attention (especially when the wearer is working in the dishroom where conditions can become quite messy). The dish crew adds a little bit of variety to the daily routine of college life.

Apart from their roles as entertainers, the dish crew has many hard and strenuous tasks. There are six people on each crew, and each person has his particular job, ranging from dumping the glasses and arranging them on racks to be sent through the dishwasher to scraping, washing, and stacking the plates and trays. The continuous flow of students going in and out of the dining hall make these jobs a real test of endurance.

But the college has taken some steps to alleviate many of the problems and complications that cropped up both last year and this year. Last year, the dishes were all placed on a conveyor belt and carried to the kitchen. This year, there is a line of five people, each doing his own job. Upon talking to some of last year's dish crew that are on the crew again this year, it was discovered that there were mixed emotions in reference to the change.

Some felt that the conveyor belt system was much easier on the workers since it gave the workers a chance to rest in between the rushes. With the present system, one has to spend his time catching up from the last rush. Another favorable aspect of the conveyor belt system was that the workers were spread out, while presently, all of the people on the dish crew are crushed into one small room where it gets very hot.

On the other hand, many felt that the present system was superior to the old. They supported their assertion with the fact that it removed the garbage out of the kitchen area where the food is being prepared. Also, the dish room is located in a central area allowing the "runner" to refill the glass racks and the tray racks without milling through a crowd. The location is also advantageous for the student, because it allows them to just deposit their trays on their way out of the dining; they don't even have to go out of their way.

A statement made by Mark

Dresback, Student Assistant Personnel Manager, former dish crew worker, seems to sum up the situation. Mark explained, "the conveyor was easier to work, but the present system works well if the students will just be patient and cooperate." Paula Flint reinforced Mark's statement by saying, "the system is efficient only if the students are patient and do their part. If the students don't all cooperate, then it's no good."

It was suggested that the students cease from stuffing their glasses and messing the trays up by smearing their food all over them. The messing may be fun, but it's at the dish crew's expense.

Cedarville students labor painstakingly in an effort to keep the student body satisfied with prompt and courteous service. Utilization of this new system provides for efficient clean up.

Student can't escape exams

KENT, Ohio (CH) - A Kent State U. student wanting to avoid taking final exams "kidnapped himself" to another state, according to police here.

The 21-year-old student reportedly took a bus to Cleveland, and then another to Cincinnati where he stayed for three days before turning up in Lexington, Ky. He had then reported three men kidnapped him for "apparently political reasons" but were unable to carry out their plans.

The Lexington police and the FBI, which were both investigating the alleged abduction, did not press any charges, but a Kent judge fined the student $750 and sentenced him to 90 days in jail for obstructing official business. The jail term and $500 of the fine were suspended. The final exams still await him.

money:

A medium of exchange. The paradox is that if you live just to get it—you'll die without value. We know of nearly 20,000 places where your skills might be used in Christ's service. Many times long hours, hard work and little money—but the payoff is big in eternity! To investigate what you might do with your skills and experience start by writing or calling.

Curriculum Expanded

Cedarville College will be beginning three new programs next year. The first is a one year Bible program resulting in a certificate. This is for anyone who is interested in just taking Bible courses.

The college is also restarting a secretarial program. Stopped in the 60's, it will be restarted due to requests by women and pastors. It will include a one year and two year certificate program, or a four year B.A. degree. New courses will include Beginning and Advanced Typing and Shorthand, and Secretarial Internship.

A program in Computer Science is also in its beginning stages. This program, which is very important in business, will be phased in as the equipment is provided. The college already has several mini computers, which will be used in the new courses of Computer Programming and several computer language courses.

Concert at Lakeside

Monday, May 28, at 7:30, the Symphonic Band will be featuring an outdoor concert at the lake side.

"It's Spring time," explained the director of the Symphonic Band, Mr. Pagnard, "and we've been doing formal concerts. We thought we'd try something different."

Emphasizing light pop music, their concert will consist of such pieces as Beaver's Holliday and selections from musicals.

Since the Symphonic Band does only one concert per quarter, the outdoor concert will culminate all the work they have done this quarter. "A lot of work goes on behind the scene," informed Mr. Pagnard.

The 38 member band is basically an on campus group. It is a training area for prospective band directors on standard band music.

Mr. Pagnard suggests that students take an hour break from their studies and relax in the cool grass.

If you have trouble getting away from your books, bring them with you and study to music.

The Missing Beast

"Someone must not know how to count," I said to myself as I looked down a column of faculty mailboxes in the college post office some time ago. The numbers ran like this: 664, 665, 667.

I glanced down the column again to make certain I was correct. Sure enough, Box 666 was missing.

Then it hit me, 666 is the mark of the Beast during the tribulation. But no, that can not be it, Baptists claim not to be superstitious, so why would they be afraid of a number?

Now some people are superstitious about the number 13, but I had never seen the number 666 omitted before.

At this point I had to satisfy my curiosity. I went to the window to inquire.

The window clerk, Mrs. Dillion, informed me that she knew nothing of the missing mailbox number, so I went to the top with my question.

At first I pondered whether or not to go to President Dixon with such a seemingly insignificant problem, but I decided it would not hurt to try.

"After all," I reasoned, "he does have an open door policy and I might as well take advantage of it."

To my dismay, he, also, informed me that he knew nothing about a policy omitting the number 666.

"No," he said, "it has not been the policy of the school to omit the number 666, in fact, it wouldn't bother me at all to have that number on my box."

Maybe it was, after all, only a slip up in numbering the mailboxes. The fact that it happened to be 666 was possibly only a coincidence. I had to wait until the next morning to find out from Mrs. Grisham, the supervisor of the post office.

After plowing my way through a crowd of mail-hungry students, I poked my head through the window.

Spying Mrs. Grisham around the corner stuffing mailboxes, I eagerly asked her whether she had an answer to my problem.

She simply said, "I don't like the number." My search ended.

Performance "a step forward"

Whenever a dramatic group undertakes Shakespeare, it is taking a risk - perhaps greater than with any other dramatic style. For although the plays of William Shakespeare have been the most often produced of the past four hundred years, they also carry with them the most expectations. For a school with the size and limitations of Cedarville, the presentation of the comedy As You Like It may have seemed to some a bold, if not presumptuous, endeavor. However, the cast and crew of the production, directed by Mrs. Rebecca Baker, gave a commendable performance, yet one in which the presence of several handicaps affected its overall luster and energy.

The overriding hindrance of the opening night performance was the heat. First, it made for an uncomfortable audience which otherwise was remarkably attentive and well-behaved for Cedarville. Despite audience members' attempts to fend off their discomfort during the first half of the play, the heat gradually wore down their resistance and took its toll by way of decreased responsiveness in the second half.

In addition, the heat effected the cast, who had not rehearsed with an impending hot spell in mind. Combined with the factors of a large cast and little backstage area, it was evident that the heat had sapped some energy from the players before they appeared on stage.

A second limitation was a high number of inexperienced or minimally experienced actors. Of a cast of 33, half had never acted in a college production. Out of these newcomers, though, came a number of delightful surprises. Dukes Senior and Frederick (Dave Marsteller and Dave Kisner) proved especially effective in their roles. Mr. Marsteller moved and spoke with a credible air of nobility and compassion and was a joy to watch in his first performance as the ousted duke. Mr. Kisner is commended for his sharp and forceful portrayal of the usurping tyrant Frederick. Oliver, the eldest brother (Ken Andrus), was more than sufficiently evil and arrogant, yet appeared almost stereotypically villainous at times.

Among the "veteran" actors, those familiar to the Cedarville stage, several need to be cited. Michael Brumbaugh (Henry Higgins of last spring's Pygmalion) as the jester Touchstone turned in a charming performance and was perhaps the best-loved character of the evening. Mr. Brumbaugh also displayed an expertise at timing, which is the essence of good comedy.

John Duff, as the melancholy Jaques, put an appropriate "damper" on every festive scene he entered, and with unmatched nonchalance transformed music into gloom. ("I can suck melancholy out of a song as a weasel sucks eggs.") Byron Major, as Corin the aged shepherd, manifested much character study as he had incorporated the shuffling walk, speech, and mannerisms into his role. Wesley Baker, as Adam the servant, came across strongly and clearly, but perhaps too vigorously for the part of an 80-year-old man. At times his walk was somewhat fast-paced.

The four major women's parts ranged in intensity as well as personality. Audrey's (Denise Kelso) antics were humorous and seemingly natural, and she and Touchstone worked well together. Desiree Kirk, as Phoebe, showed the audience convincingly what it is to fall in love at first sight.

Lori LaHaye, as Celia, played her part with grace and femininity, and was an expressive confidante and overseer to Rosalind's antics. Her budding interest in Oliver was depicted well. As for Rosalind (Renee Globig), her sense of powerlessness in the presence of Orlando, a sort of "melting" reaction, was excellent. However, Shakespeare's Rosalind is a very strong role, for she is a schemer, almost to the point of manipulation, exercising control over the entire plot. In this respect, Miss Globig fell somewhat short. The strong-minded, determined engineer gave way to a too sweet, passive woman whose schemes seemed almost too spontaneous, and not deliberate enough.

Opposite Rosalind was Orlando, played by Jim Leightenheimer. An experienced actor, Mr. Leightenheimer was resolute, strong-willed when necessary, and always polished. Yet, the audience needed to see Orlando's weakness in the face of love. One did not get the impression of the nearly incapacitating symptoms of the courtly love tradition of which he spoke. Overall, though, Mr. Leightenheimer was dashing.

The chorus and instrumental ensemble added a timely flavor to the production, however, the chorus needed more enunciation and projection. Given the facilities of Alford Auditorium, the set design and properties were very attractive as well as functional. The use of varied levels throughout the play was effective, and the costumes added tremendously to the color and period recreation.

As for the general energy level of the production, it must be said that the play began with a level that was not sustained throughout, perhaps due to the heat. One did not sense that the actors were saving their energy for the end. In fact, the final wedding scene, although a colorful panorama, was a bit of a disappointment, and the epilogue was practically impotent.

So, as far as Shakespeare at Cedarville goes, although As You Like It represented a great step forward from past attempts of the same kind, featuring several sparkling performances and introducing promising new talent, the obstacles that were encountered last week might serve as an indication as to whether such grand endeavors are best suited for Cedarville's limitations.

Scenes of spring have become more common around Cedarville in the past weeks. This renewal of life reminds us of the ever-nearing graduation date.

Christine Wyrzten to perform

Christine Wyrzten will perform a sacred vocal concert on Friday, May 25, at 8:00 in the James T. Jeremiah Chapel with an outdoor reception tentatively planned for after the concert.

Although Christine Wyrzten is commonly known for vocal performance, she is also gifted in other areas of music as well. Her versatility ranges from the piano and flute to writing and arranging music.

"Christine is a creative talent in the studio, but she is also an expert musician," says Paul Gathany, General Manager of WCDR and of Christian Educational Publications; he was one of the men that worked with Christine on the production of Deb and Dee's record.

Seeing the vocal talent that Christine demonstrates, one might expect that she has had years of vocal training, but she has not. Throughout her high school years, Christine performed largely on piano, organ, and flute. During her summer vacations, she played piano and organ for Word of Life in Schroom Lake, New York.

It was not until she had been married for two or three years that she began to sing. Her first taste of vocal performance came when she sang with a Word of Life group.

The next year Christine began singing solos at Word of Life. The first musical that Christine was featured as soloist was entitled: "Let Freedom Ring." Not only was she the soloist in the musical by Harry Bolback, but she also arranged and orchestrated it.

She has arranged many of Bolback's musicals and all of her own records, usually doing her own back-up voices; and seldom using professional help. All of the keyboard required for her records is also her own work.

Christine explains, "the temptation is great for singers, yes, even gospel artists, to be motivated by a hunger for success - at the same time forfeiting God's richest blessings . . . It is my prayer that this material (her songs) will mirror the face of Christ and present spiritual truths that will enrich your life for him."

Currently, Christine has four records that are available. This year, she plans to record two more records. One of the records will consist of Christmas songs and the other of marriage love songs.

Senior Athlete: Fred Greetham

Everyone loves the underdog, and Cedarville College has one fighting to make it in the captain of its baseball team, senior Fred Greetham.

Fred began with good training. Living with his family, including his two sisters, in the small town of Wellington, Ohio, Fred was taught many baseball fundamentals by his father at a young age. Fred played summer ball for a Little League and Hot Stove team from the age of seven to nineteen. He was a second baseman, and was ironically known as a defensive player. In his sophomore year in high school, Fred doubled in his first at-bat, and has started every game since. He played outfield through high school, had a good batting average of around .337, and was named to the all-league team.

He was offered a scholarship to go to Ashland College, but he came to Cedarville to look the school over anyway. The day he came, the baseball team played the worst team in the league, and Fred was so impressed that he decided to come to Cedarville.

He had an average freshman year, batting .314, and played center field, as he has for his entire college career. In his sophomore year, he worked a lot with Dan Coombs, the assistant coach, and Dan completely refined his game. He batted .446, and broke the school records of runs-batted-in with thirty two, and runs scored with thirty one. He leads the Mid-Ohio Conference in average, RBI's, hits, runs, and stolen bases, and was named to the NAIA All-District team. That summer, he went to Mexico with the Youth in Action baseball team, and played Class AA ball in Dayton.

He had another fine year as a junior, batting .417, with 20 RBI's and 17 stolen bases. He led the district in average, and was the team MVP. That summer he played Class AAA ball in Cleveland, batting .390, and was named to the All-Star team.

It was at this point that he faced one of the toughest decisions of his life; he was offered a full scholarship by Grand Canyon College, the number one team in the nation this year. He says, "My whole life I have wanted to play pro ball. If I would have gone to Grand Canyon, it would have been assured." But he turned the matter over to the Lord, and decided to finish his education here.

Fred has played well again this year, with an average of .417, 35 hits and 30 stolen bases. In the remaining games, he has the chance of breaking the school record in each of those departments; he needs a .455 average, 45 hits and 32 stolen bases. He should lead the district again in several categories, and has a chance of being named NAIA All-American. He has been invited to the Pan-Am tryouts.

While at Cedarville, Fred has been a member of the Varsity C Club and Pi Sigma.

"My goal now is to just get the chance to be drafted." He does seem to have a good possibility to be drafted in the pro draft at the beginning of June because he has been contacted by almost every professional baseball team. He thinks his best chance is with the Cleveland Indians, as he has been contacted by the president of their minor league organization. But he also says, "My desire now is to serve the Lord. If he calls me into pro ball, I will use the medium of athletics."

Fred hopes to eventually coach and teach at the high school level. Then he wants to get his masters degree and coach at the college level. He says, "I really feel privileged to play with a group of guys dedicated to the Lord. I thank the Lord for leading me here. For a Christian, the only way to go is to be a winner, to give his best in every aspect."

Fred Greetham, a senior at Cedarville College, smashes a low drive down the base line in the second game in a doubleheader against Tiffin on Cedar Day. The Jackets were victorious.

Dave Rogers carries the javelin during competition at the N.C.C.A.A. meet May 5, where he placed first in the discus throw.

Women in playoffs

The Cedarville College Women's Softball team is rolling along to one of their finest seasons. Their most recent conquest was over Rio Grande. The two wins upped their season record to 14-6, and a berth in the OALAW playoffs.

To date the team has been paced by the hitting of Junior co-captains Brenda Hobar and Sue Kulp. Hobar has banged out a season average of .529, while Kulp has supplied the RBI strength along with a solid .429 average. Other hitters with lofty batting averages are freshman Laurie Butler hitting at .500, junior Vicki Butler hitting at .444 and sophomore Sue Riegle hitting .417.

The OALAW tournament held at Lakeland Community College will feature some of the better teams in the state, and local softballers have their eyes on winning the tournament.

Cindermen capture 3rd place

The Cedarville college track team finished third place in the National Christian College Athletic Association track meet which was hosted by Cedarville on May 5. The local cindermen finished with a team total of 83 points which was just behind second place finishers, King's College (New York,) and a distance behind meet winner Liberty Baptist (Virginia,) who totalled 121 team points. The Yellow Jackets had a good showing as they placed ahead of 18 other schools in placing third in the 21 team field.

Individual highlights for Cedarville was the showing of Senior Dave Rogers who finished first in the discus throw with a throw of 140'7", with an additional second place finish in the shot put. Rich Crist gave the Yellow Jackets points as he placed just behind Rogers in the shot put with a third place finish. Marc Peters vaulted 13'6" in capturing the pole vault competition. Freshman Mark Bubel raced the 400 meters in a mere 50.4 seconds in winning that event. Junior Tom Yater placed second in the steeplechase event. Dale Shaw, who was the individual champion in the NCCAA Cross-Country meet in the fall captured second place in the 5,000 meter race.

Dave Rogers was named

NCCAA All-American for the third time. As was Mark Bubel achieved NCCAA All-American status for his first place finish in the 400 meters. Dale Shaw was also named among the All-Americans, for his achievements in the season.

The NCCAA meet was the finale for the cindermen, with the only remaining meet being the NAIA District # 22 meet. Several of the Yellow Jacket trackmen participated in the event eyeing a trip to the NAIA Championships, among those being Marc Peters, Dave Rogers, Mark Bubel, James Spurrier, Dale Shaw, Tom Yater, and Rich Crist.

Jackets in tournament action

The Cedarville College baseball team invaded Malone College territory May 9 for the NAIA District Tournament and startled powerful Malone by nearly upsetting them in an action-packed ten inning game. The Yellow Jackets had won five of their previous eight games to qualify for the tournament. Cedarville was eliminated from the tournament in the second game by Mount Vernon.

Coach Tom Hopewell described the Malone game as "one of the best college baseball games I have ever seen." Senior pitching ace Randy Dagwin threw for eight innings for the Jackets and Dave Lawhead pitched the last two innings.

Malone started off the scoring in the bottom of the first inning with one run and scored another in the second to make it 2-0. Ron Hobar led off the third inning with a single and scored Cedarville's first run on a wild pitch.

Two more runs were tallied for Malone in the fourth inning before Cedarville stormed back with three runs in the sixth. Al Stewart made it to first base on a walk and was advanced to second when Dave Stewart got a single because of an error. Dan Fullmer walked to load the bases and then Dave Merkh was walked scoring Stewart. With the bases still loaded, Ron Hobar lashed out a single to score the other two runs. However, Malone added one more run in the bottom of the sixth and one in the seventh to lead 6-4.

Marty Devine slugged a home run in the ninth to narrow the deficit to one run. Greg Greve doubled and was driven home on a clutch single by Dan Fullmer with two outs which sent the game into extra innings.

The Jackets failed to score in the top of the tenth and had to leave Fred Greetham stranded on second base. Malone scored the winning run in the bottom of the tenth inning to make the final score 7-6.

Mount Vernon featured their best pitcher in the second game of the tournament. He proved to be effective as Cedarville could only manage one hit and two runs in the 4-2 loss.

The Jackets had begun their run for the playoffs April 26 by splitting a doubleheader with Ohio Dominican to snap a four game losing streak. Cedarville won the first game 5-3 before dropping the second 6-5. The first game featured back to back home runs by Fred Greetham and Marty Devine.

In the next contest Walsh edged out the Jackets 9-7 in the opener before Cedarville stormed back in the second game to trounce Walsh 16-2. Al Stewart cranked out a home run in the opener. Ron Hobar had four hits and Kent Craig hit a home run in the second game.
